Rhadegund Life Sciences (RLS, www.rls.co.nz) has just joined Natural Products NZ. The company was established in 2011 by George Slim to apply his more than 25 years experience in the science system to building New Zealand's innovative industries.

George has worked in academia, the CRI sector and government. After getting his PhD from Otago he spent a number of years in the UK before returning to New Zealand as a researcher at the CRI Industrial Research Ltd (IRL). At IRL he led a large group working in bioactive natural products. The group principally worked on identifying and proving the biological activity of New Zealand natural products and developing novel, commercially applicable processes that preserve activity in the final product. After leaving IRL he worked for New Zealand Trade and Enterprise (NZTE) as IP Commercialisation Specialist. Immediately before starting RLS he worked for the Ministry of Research Science and Technology (MoRST).

George has broad experience at the interface of business, research and government. He has particular expertise in managing collaborative research to deliver commercial results as well as in strategy setting, relationship management and policy understanding.
